

Dad's Automotive Type Helps Decide Father's Day Gift

There are two types of fathers, those who work on their cars and those who don't. Whether your dad is a do-it-yourselfer (DIY) or a Do-It-For-Me type (DIFM), consider an automotive gift for dad this Father's Day.

Sixty-three percent of male drivers work on their car, truck, mini van or SUV, according to Car Care Canada. Whether it's light maintenance, like changing the oil and replacing the wiper blades, or heavier projects, such as replacing brake shoes, most dads enjoy taking care of their vehicles. Automotive accessories, tools, parts and products make ideal Father's Day gifts.

"If Dad's a do-it-yourselfer, a gift certificate from the local auto parts store would be appropriate," says Car Care Canada's Marc Brazeau. "If he's a do-it-for me, think about a gift certificate for an oil change or other service at his favorite repair shop."

Everyone loves a clean car, so offer to clean and polish Dad's vehicle yourself.

Remember to use automotive washes and waxes, not dishwashing detergent from under the kitchen sink. This can harm the vehicle's finish.
